Michael Lisi has experience in a broad range of complex business litigation, including technology-related litigation, intellectual property disputes, contract and licensing matters, and antitrust litigation. Michael has represented individuals and corporations in numerous actions involving claims of patent and trademark infringement, trade secret misappropriation, fraud, breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty and unfair business practices. He has experience at the trial and appellate levels, and practices in both the state and federal courts. Michael has also had experience handling securities and other complex commercial litigation, including the defense of enforcement actions and investigations by the Securities and Exchange Commission and the NASD.

Before joining the firm Krieg, Keller, Sloan, Reilley & Roman LLP, Michael worked for several years in the San Francisco office of Cooley Godward LLP, and also spent one year in the Washington, D.C. office of Wilmer, Cutler & Pickering. In addition, Michael clerked for the Honorable Anthony J. Scirica, Chief Judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, during the 1997-98 term.
